Luck Not Part of Pro Football

I've heard it every year that I've been in the league. The fans say it, the media folks write it and broadcast it, but those that live it know better.

The elusive it I'm referring to is LUCK. It's always 'That lucky guy', or 'They get all the breaks'. But when you get right to the core of winning and losing — why one team has a consistent winning program and another doesn't — luck has relatively little real affect on the matter.

Hard Work

It's the same in any profession: 'The harder you work, the luckier you get.' That is what I'm trying to follow as a motto for 1976.

There is just no way that someone can rely on 'luck' to help him in any career. Yet people give a great deal of credit to lady luck in so many situations.

If you look behind the scenes you will find that any good produced today is derived from honest hard work. Alright, so maybe it sounds corny or a little idealistic, but the work pays off.

Never Hurt

One of the payoffs for me has been my relatively injury-free career. Going into the 1976 season I've played in 140 consecutive games, but please don't say I've been lucky, I'd rather say I've worked hard to stay away from injuries.

The great teams of professional football — the Packers under Vince Lombardi, the Monsters of the Midway under Mr. Halas and the present Pittsburgh Steelers all exhibited a winning style, but the winning took time and dedication. Overnight success is something that just isn't realistic.

Buffone's Law

I believe that there is a universal law which reads: 'The amount of effort that is put toward a particular goal will be returned in equal kind.' That is, the more you work, the more likely you are to succeed.

Sure I know it sounds simple, it sounds basic, but too many people fail to understand that it can work. But in attaining your goal you also must have the proper attitude.

Each year in looking toward the start of another football season, I ready myself by making a total commitment — I totally give of myself for the betterment of the team. You can't be selfish and hope for improvement; you need the help of your teammates, you need to work together toward one goal.

Bears — On The Way Back

It can work, you've seen it and I've seen it many times. With the right attitude and discipline you're more than halfway there.

And the attitude, properly cared for, stays with you throughout the year, even after the football season.

During the winter and spring I'll either be at Lake Forest College or the Irving Park YMCA to keep in shape. My weight training program and plenty of basketball help me to keep in shape and to maintain my competitive spirit.

That spirit is becoming more and more evident throughout the present Chicago Bear team. It's obviously going to be a tough road back for all of us on the squad.

But with a lot of hard work and its accompanying luck, we are on our way to becoming champions.

Below is Fernando Esparza who already knows the meaning of working hard in order to achieve something that you want, please read on about this young man.

Scholarship Award to Esparza

Fernando Esparza receives his scholarship award from Chicago Mayor Richard Daley (center) and Bear Doug Buffone.

Chicago Bear fans made linebacker Doug Buffone their choice in the balloting for the Dodge-NFL Man of the Year last season. Because of that choice Dodge has established a $1,000 scholarship in Buffone's name.

After the balloting it was the Board of Education's Scholarship Selection Committee's turn to make a choice. There were 119 highly qualified area high school graduates to be considered for the scholarship. Their choice was Fernando Esparza, who lives at 2628 South Kedzie in Chicago.

The Farragut High School graduate ranked number one in a class of 300 students with a grade point average of 4.13. He was a member of the school's Senior Cabinet, swimming team and honor society.

He was also a member of the National Honor Society for three academic years, an Illinois State Scholar and he has won awards for achievements in algebra and geometry.

Esparza will use the grant to attend the Illinois Institute of Technology where he plans to major in electrical engineering.

The Dodge-NFL Man of the Year competition is coordinated by the Pro Football Hall of Fame and honors the outstanding 'citizen-athletes' of the National Football League. Candidates are named on the basis of their civic contributions as well as their athletic ability.

Fans throughout the nation voted during the 1975 season in selecting the individual club winners and a select media committee named the overall Dodge-NFL Man of the Year — Ken Anderson of the Cincinnati Bengals was given that award.

Altogether, $39,000 in Dodge-NFL Man of the Year scholarships will be distributed in the 26 NFL cities. We at the Bear Report congratulate Chicago's winner, Fernando Esparza.

Steelers Dominant in Shortened Rain Game

by Kevin Pates
Bear Report Editor

If Noah's Ark had been available at Soldier Field last Friday night, the College All-Star football team would have wasted no time in climbing aboard.

As it turned out, there was no Ark at the park and no rescue for Ara Parseghian's All-Stars. A wild rain storm and the two-time defending world champion Pittsburgh Steelers combined to hand the collegians their 13th straight loss in the annual classic, this year by a 24-0 margin.

The Flood

Ironically it was during the All-Stars 13th possession of the evening when the game was abruptly terminated. At 10:49 p.m. CDT, and the All-Stars on the Steeler 34-yard line, high winds and a flooding rain began to drop one-half inch of water onto Soldier Field.

Within three minutes, both teams had returned to their respective lockerrooms and were replaced by hundreds of the 52,895 assembled multitude. World Championship Turf Sliding then became Chicago's newest sport craze and little could be done, or was attempted to be done, in clearing these soggy fans from the field of play.

It's Over

Then, in an unprecedented decision, the All-Star game was officially called off at 11:01 p.m. — there was 1:22 remaining to be played in the third quarter.

The announcement read: "The 43rd Annual All-Star Game was terminated in the third quarter following a meeting between Commissioner Pete Rozelle and officials of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

The decision was made because of the weather, dangerous field conditions and the risk of injury to both player and fans."

All-Star Frustration

Little went right for the All-Stars through the nearly three quarters of action. Only once did the collegiate offense manage to get into Pittsburgh territory on its own. Top quarterbacks

Mike Kruczek (thigh contusion) and Craig Penrose (dislocated finger) were both out by the early minutes of the second quarter leaving only Jeb Blount (Tulsa) to direct the collegians.

Twice Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw was intercepted, with Steve Wagner's (Wisconsin) theft putting the All-Stars in their best position of the night, at the Pittsburgh 25-yard line. Three plays later Blount fumbled the ball away.

Bear Rookies

The Chicago Bears' top two collegiate draft picks of 1976, wide receiver Brian Baschnagel and offensive tackle Dennis Lick, were both in the All-Star first unit. Yet, again, neither was given a fair test in their first local appearance as the All-Star offense continually stalled.

Only one pass all night was thrown in Baschnagel's direction (a 30-yard toss at mid-field), but he was surrounded by Steelers and the overthrown aerial fell incomplete. Lick's presence became apparent late in the first quarter when the press box PA man announced that the former Wisconsin tackle was guilty of holding.

Now at Camp

Both rookies reported to the Bears training camp the next day to begin belated drills at Lake Forest.

Each got in some work on that first day, although Baschnagel, for the time being, was on defense. Because the receiving looks deep at this point, the former Ohio State star will compete with the defensive backs.

Lick met many of the Bear defensive line for the first time, head-on, from his right tackle spot.

Defense Tough

But back to the game and there were some bright moments for the All-Stars. In fact, the collegian defense looked impressive throughout the night. Only nine points could be registered by Pittsburgh in the first half on three Roy Gerela field goals.

The All-Stars outgained the Steelers on the ground during the opening 30 minutes — 32-30 yards. Linebacker Troy Archer (Colorado) with eight tackles and right tackle Dewey Selmon (Oklahoma) and back Aaron Kyle (Wyoming), with four tackles apiece in the first half, were outstanding. Middle linebacker Ed Simonini (Texas A&M) was also impressive.

Frustration

The frustration of the All-Stars was best portrayed early in the third quarter. It was the first series of the second half for the collegians, who could advance the ball no further than their own 33 before running out of downs. On the punt attempt, center Ray Pinney (Washington) snapped the ball high over the head of punter Rick Engles (Tulsa) and into the end zone for a safety.

Ara

After retiring from Notre Dame football, following the 1974 season, the return for coach Parseghian was not under the best of circumstances.

"We couldn't seem to execute the fundamental elements of the game," Parseghian said. "Maybe with a dry field we could have executed better. But I'm not taking anything from an outstanding Pittsburgh defense, though we contributed to some of that.

"Jeb Blount hung in there and for the time he worked with the team (in practice) he did a hellava job. The wind really came up in the third quarter and made our job increasingly difficult.

"It was unusual, a rarity. No, I have never been involved with a football game that was called because of weather.

"I guess I may have helped get it (fans on the field) going. I didn't want to waste two downs when the rain started, so I signaled the QB to call time out. By the time it was called, the thing was really going. The next thing I knew I looked to the South end and the place was flooded with people," Parseghian concluded.

Ara to Noah, Ara to Noah, get ready to cue the Ark.

Offensive Line Eliminates Questions

Mark Nordquist carried his new 30-pound pride and joy and a wide grin. He would have showed off the addition to his family, but he couldn't find it. It was scattered around throughout his body.

"I get on the scale and it says I've gained 30 pounds," Nordquist said. His new buddy helped pad his 6-4 frame with 265 pounds of insulation, which he knew would withstand more pummeling from halfback hunters than the 235-pound 1975 model did.

"Otherwise, I don't feel any difference. I can even run faster. I had a weight program to put it on in the off-season, and I'll need the extra strength. There are a lot of linemen here this year."

Fewer Bodies

The term "a lot of linemen" has taken on a new meaning at the Bears' Lake Forest training camp this summer. "Last year it was like a bus station, so many people were in and out," right tackle Jeff Sevy recalled.

Now there aren't so many bodies, but neither are there so many questions about whether the linemen can prevent ball carriers from falling on their own cleat marks. "There's just no comparison between our line this year and the guys we had last year," Coach Jack Pardee says.

Since running backs and quarterbacks have an uncanny way of improving when they line up behind talented giants, the change likely will not go unnoticed. General manager Jim Finks knew that when he made Ron Yary the league's first draft choice and a Viking cornerstone in 1968, and he hadn't forgotten it when he had a chance to draft Dennis Lick in the first round last spring.

Cohesiveness

Even before drafting Lick, and then tackle Dan Jiggetts in the sixth round, Finks had said the Bears' strengths were their offensive and defensive lines. The problem last year was that Sevy, left guard Noah Jackson and center Dan Peiffer were rookies (the first two making the league's all-rookie team) and Nordquist was a newcomer at right guard. So left tackle Lionel Antoine was the only Bear holdover of the starting unit.

"We didn't know what to expect from each other," Sevy said. "Now we all know what to do on certain plays, and we know what the other guys are going to do. We don't have to spend so much time teaching and we're more cohesive as a unit."

"To build a line, you've got to play together and develop that cohesiveness. You can make a great block, but it doesn't do any good if you don't know where the back's going or what the guy next to you is doing."

Sevy to Move?

Since Lick was drafted as a right tackle, Sevy was expected to move to guard, his preference after playing there in his 1974 WFL season. But Bob Asher, whom Sevy beat out last year, retired last week and left the Bears with three tackles and four guards, not including Sevy.

For Sevy to play guard now, Pardee said Lick would have to show he can win the right tackle job and Jiggetts would have to show he can back up at right and left tackle. Neither is out of the question. Lick, the southwest sider from Wisconsin and St. Rita, was generally considered the best offensive lineman in the draft pool, and Jiggetts played some right guard at Harvard, so that side isn't foreign to him.

Sevy would be hard to keep out of the starting line-up, at whichever position. "He's the strongest lineman in the league," Asher said.

Among the other guards, Jackson's job seems the surest and Pardee likes second-year man Revie Sorey, the Illinois alum. He doesn't say much about Bob Newton, who helped Asher anchor Abe Gibron's lines.

Peiffer's the biggest center I've ever seen," Asher said, and the 6-3, 260-pounder's recovery from late-season knee surgery has been so complete that he didn't miss any early training camp drills. Dan Neal, who replaced Peiffer in the last three 1975 games, can play any line position and is the team's long snap specialist.

Jiggetts Learning

Lick's two weeks in the college All-Star camp gave him a disadvantaged start because offensive line plays take longer to learn than any of the others. Jiggetts has found that out.

"I was spinning my wheels with all the different calls for awhile," Jiggetts said. "They're all starting to fit together now. I'm learning my scats from my scoops. Now I'm starting to polish, learn what everyone else does in the plays."

"The thing I've found most difficult here is keeping my speed and staying low. This game is played really low. They don't try to run over you up here, they use moves to go around."

Kevin Lamb is a sports writer for the Chicago Daily News.

Bear Briefs

Ex-Bear players and coaches will be honored during the Chicago vs Atlanta Falcon game September 26 at Soldier Field. It will be the 40th such occasion that Bear alumni, graduates of Halas University, will have gathered for — the first such was held in 1937.

Bears Lend Hand

Head coach Jack Pardee and running back Mike Adamle were on television quite a bit throughout Chicagoland in late June ... but the 1976 season was not the topic of conversation.

The two Bear representatives were seen in commercials which benefitted Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago and specifically parents of young cancer victims of the hospital.

All proceeds from the sale of the advertised Arctic Orange Shakes (during that late June period) have gone to finance the new Ronald McDonald House. The lodging facility will be located within walking distance of Children's Memorial hospital, where the families of children being treated for leukemia or other types of cancer can reside during treatment sessions.

Outpatient treatment with chemotherapy and radiotherapy, in addition to general testing brings about 160 children to the hospital each week. In many cases the children and their families have to travel long distances; and while the patient is being treated often brothers and sisters and parents have had to sit in the hospital waiting rooms and corridors for many hours. The McDonald House will help to change this situation.

"The house will permit these parents to talk to one another," coach Pardee said. "That's important, because the parents who have been involved for a while can help the ones who have just received the news."

Pardee speaks from personal experience. "I am a cured cancer victim," he said. "I can remember when the doctor gave me the word. He had removed a mole from my arm and after the biopsy he told me that I had cancer and would have to undergo surgery in a week," he said.

Pardee had surgery, on his upper right arm, but came back to play two more years as a linebacker in the NFL.

The house will be owned and operated by the Children's Oncology Services of Illinois. The facility will be a ten-bedroom house in the neighborhood of Children's Memorial and the parents and families of the cancer patients will be able to stay there for $5 a night.

Deficits in funding will be made up through personal donations and contributions, continued support of the Association of Chicagoland McDonald's Restaurants, promotional activities of the Chicago Bears and corporate and professional donations.

Any further donations to the McDonald House cause will be accepted through the Children's Oncology Services of Illinois, 120 South LaSalle St., Suite 851, Chicago, Illinois 60603.

Week One Encouraging

The conclusion of the first week of double sessions (July 17) had coach Jack Pardee in the mood for comparison.

"We're so much better this year after our first few practices than we were a year ago ... there's really no comparison," he said. "The blocking of our entire line is very encouraging and that includes our tight ends."

"Sure it's true we haven't scrimmaged the Raiders, Vikings or any of the great defensive teams, but you can believe that we're better. Just how much better or what that improvement will mean in terms of wins, we can't tell yet," Pardee continued.

"Even the attitude of the team is better. There's enthusiasm and good concentration, so we're getting more accomplished with our practice time."

Back To Help

In addition to a year's maturity for a team that last season rostered a league-leading 17 rookies, middle linebacker Don Rives (foot) and wide receiver Ron Shanklin (knee) appear ready to help their respective units.

After battling the scales for his first two NFL seasons as a converted 205-pound guard from Texas Tech, Rives saw just one quarter of 1975 action before suffering a broken bone in his right foot.

The ensuing period of inactivity, while the bone was on the mend, may have been a blessing for Rives. He has added 30 pounds to his 1974 playing weight of 215. But at 245, Rives had looked and run like a tackle through the camp's indoctrination period.

Down to 235 now, he has sparkled with the first defensive unit during regular camp sessions.

Ron's Back

Shanklin had surgery to correct cartilage damage in his left knee in December, after missing the entire 1975 regular season. The former all-Pro the Bears obtained in a trade with Pittsburgh last August couldn't run at full speed in that spring camp.

Now coaches have to control his practice time so that he doesn't overwork the knee too much, too early. Asked how he now feels Shanklin said: "I wouldn't miss this year for anything. You see what's happening, it's going to be fun to be a part of it."

More Pardee Notes

"Ron (Shanklin) should be all right and ready to go full scale for the start of our regular season — all of his signs are positive. He should be testing his leg, in game competition, early in the exhibition season. Although he'll probably miss the first game.

"Muscle fatigue has caused a fluid build-up for Ron during our scrimmages. But as soon as that leg strengthens, then the fluid will decrease," coach Pardee said.

The Superpickers

Superpickers Go On Record in Pre-Season Slate

By Tim Sullivan, Randy Wievel, and Mike Haberman

By way of introduction, we are the Superpickers. It is our job to tell you who we think the winners of each week's NFL games will be. This will not be easy. None of us actually knows more about pro football than you do.

Our qualifications for writing a column like this are not impressive. We watch a lot of games on television, listen to a few on the radio, and read a newspaper every so often. Other than that, we couldn't tell you the difference between a safety and a cornerback.

The three of us have been guessing on the outcomes of pro football games for the past six years. The word is guessing. We did not say forecasting, prognosticating, predicting, or any other exciting word. We said "guessing". We learned long time ago that it is impossible to "predict" the NFL schedule with any great degree of accuracy. Therefore, we tend to guess a lot. It will be your job, should you accept the assignment of reading our column every week, to figure out when we're giving you our best choices and when we're handing you a bunch of baloney. Many times, we can't distinguish between the two viewpoints ourselves.

We have exactly two goals in mind this season. The first is to try to guess correctly in at least three out of every four games. The second, and more important to us, will be an attempt on our part to make our column as interesting as we possibly can for you to read.

And so, our first move will be to take a look at the first week of the NFL pre-season slate. Just remember, every one of the teams is starting all over again and should be considered as equals.

Also remember: the Superpickers tend to lie on occasion.

Here are our selections for Week No 1 of the 1976 NFL pre-season:

HOUSTON OVER KANSAS CITY — For one thing, we don't think the Oilers will use very many of their stars. For another, we don't think Kansas City HAS any. Oilers by a bunch.

SAN DIEGO OVER PHILADELPHIA — We'll go with San Diego, especially if Randy Jones is pitching. Might have a shutout here. San Diego by 9.

CHICAGO OVER DENVER — The last time we picked Denver over the Bears, four guys carrying violin cases came over and pointed out our mistake. We admitted an error had been made and promised never to do it again. Chicago by 29.

ATLANTA OVER WASHINGTON — The Falcons should be formidable enough to squeeze over a touchdown or two, while the Redskins will use this contest to introduce all of their new old players to each other. Atlanta by 3.

RAMS OVER TAMPA BAY — This is John McKay's return to Los Angeles. After this scrimmage, which the Rams should win by 77 points, McKay might never leave the place.

ST. LOUIS OVER NEW YORK JETS — We're not even sure the Jets can field a team, since everyone played out their options. Besides, the Cardinals should have a healthy Bake McBride back again. Cards by 14 in nine innings.

CLEVELAND VERSUS BALTIMORE (in Lincoln, Nebraska) — Not an easy one to pick, but since this game's in Lincoln, Nebraska, we'll take the Cornhuskers by 3.

GREEN BAY OVER CINCINNATI — The fact that Paul Brown left the Bengals shouldn't hurt all that much, but he went a little far by taking the playbook with him. Kenny Anderson telling Isaac Curtis and Chip Myers to merely "run out for a long one" won't be enough to sack the Pack. Green Bay by 10.

SAN FRANCISCO OVER SEATTLE — We figure Seattle will move to Milwaukee next year. 49ers by 21.

NEW ENGLAND OVER NEW YORK GIANTS — The Giants have improved themselves about 300% with the addition of Csonka and a whole new offensive line. The Patriots shouldn't beat them by more than 14.

OAKLAND OVER DALLAS — We'll take the Raiders, unless Dallas throws some last-minute bombs and Field Judge Armen Terzian is discovered wandering around in the secondary. Oakland, we would imagine, by 6.

DETROIT OVER BUFFALO — A dandy game, with the Lions probably winning on a forfeit as the Bills show up at Tiger Stadium instead of Pontiac.

MINNESOTA OVER MIAMI — The Vikings lost over 100 receptions when Marinaro (54) and Gilliam (50) both played out their options. Shouldn't matter much, since Paul Krause and Bobby Bryant will catch enough passes to compensate for the migration. Vikings by 7.

NEW ORLEANS OVER PITTSBURGH — Picker Wievel is a long-time Philly fan and refuses to take Pittsburgh until the Pirates are mathematically eliminated, which should come around August 2. To keep harmony in our ranks, we gotta go with the Saints by 1.

Super Sports Quiz No. 2

Linda Buffone Meets Big Business

Linda Buffone has the glamorous good looks of a girl you'd expect to see boogying the night away at a downtown disco like the BBC. Blonde hair, blue eyes, great figure, terrific smile ... A real knockout.

But Linda Buffone admits she doesn't get there much — in spite of the fact that her husband Doug owns the place. She's too busy being the wife of the Bears' premier linebacker and the mother of his three kids. And, most recently, one of the two Missing Links.

"That's the official name of the jewelry business I started two months ago with Carol Douglass (wife of former Bears quarterback Bobby)," Linda said. "We picked the name because it was the catchiest one we could think of. But Doug always tells everyone the Missing Links are Carol and me."

When Bobby Douglass' prolonged Chicago Bear career ended with his abrupt trade to the San Diego Chargers at the beginning of the 1975 season, Carol Douglass stayed behind in the family's suburban Lake Forest home to hold down the fort with her three kids.

But without Bobby, things got pretty lonely for Carol Douglass. She remembered hearing about a home jewelry operation opened by a group of players' wives on the West Coast. So she asked her friend Linda Buffone if she'd be interested in forming a Chicago chapter.

"I jumped at the chance," Linda said, her blue eyes sparkling almost as brightly as the diamond earrings she now sells. "I wasn't really aware of it at the time, but my life was pretty empty too."

"I'd come straight from a sheltered southern home life into a marriage at the naive age of 20, without ever really doing anything on my own," she said. "Sure I'm involved with my husband, my kids, and my home. But when you get down to it, you've got to accomplish something on your own before you can feel like your own person."

And for Linda Buffone, the Missing Links provided the missing link.

"It's really important for football wives, or the wives of any busy guy to fill their own lives with things they like to do," Linda said. "Otherwise, you find yourself sitting by the door or the phone, waiting for him to come home, and becoming more and more upset, the longer he stays away."

"The first few years of our marriage, I found myself saying, 'Gee, I can't wait until the season ends, so Doug will be home more,'" Linda said. "Then, when the season ended, I found myself saying, 'Gee, I can't wait until the season starts again, so Doug will be home more.'"

"It finally dawned on me that I'm plain and simply married to a guy who enjoys an active life. And whether it's football during the season, or the restaurants during the off-season, Doug Buffone is going to stay busy, no matter what he's doing."

And, now that she's found the missing link, Linda Buffone is going to stay busy, too.

But, for a girl whose only prior experience in financial management was spending her weekly allowance as a kid, it wasn't all that simple.

"It was kind of like the blind leading the blind," Linda said. "Carol went to the bank, and I went to Doug, because neither of us had the initial capital we needed to get the business started. And after that, the next problem was deciding on the proper quality and selection of merchandise to carry."

With a little advice from some of those West Coast wives who began the home jewelry operation a few years ago, and a lot of plundering through on their own, the Missing Links were finally ready to open up shop.

And, not long after that, Linda Buffone had enough money to go back to "the bank" to pay off her loan.

"The whole thing works by word of mouth, with no more than about ten people at each home showing," Linda said. "But somehow, the thing took off like wildfire. I guess women simply love jewelry. And turning buying it into a social event makes it that much more appealing."

And, faster than you can say "Missing Links", Linda Buffone and Carol Douglass had taken in a whopping ten thousand dollars gross earnings in their first six weeks of business.

"It's almost like a joke with us now," Linda said. "I pay Doug the money, and he deposits it right back into our joint account. But, no matter what he does with it, it's really important to me to pay back every penny that I borrowed."

"He takes care of his business," Linda said, "and I want to make sure that I take care of mine. I can't really explain why it's so important. I guess it clears my head, gives me another dimension, and basically just improves my sense of ME."

Maybe Doug Buffone wasn't that far off the mark, when he joked about his wife and her new business interest. Linda Buffone may not be THE missing link. But as far as her goal toward a happy, well-rounded life, she certainly has found it.

Pre-Season 1976 - Game 1

Chicago Bears at Denver Broncos

July 31, 1976 7:00 p.m. CDT

Mile High Stadium, Denver, Colo.

For the eighth time in nine years Chicago will begin its pre-season someplace other than home. Denver's Mile High Stadium is the site of the 1976 Bear opener, against the Broncos. Game time is 8 p.m. on Saturday.

Coach John Ralston's team helped to inaugurate the new season in the Hall of Fame Game, July 24, against Detroit in Canton, Ohio. The Bronco camp had opened July 12, same as the Bears, which left only two weeks of preparation for the Lions. The Broncos have been working out on the Colorado State University campus. It marked the Club's return to its home state after a four-year stay in Pomona, California for pre-season camp.

The center of attraction in the Denver camp has been the quarterback position. Charley Johnson has retired and veteran Steve Ramsey has been the leading candidate for the job. Last season, Ramsey was the team's leader in passing yards (1,562), touchdowns passing (9) and passing percentage (128-233, 54.9). Ramsey, a North Texas State grad, is starting his eighth year in professional football.

Ramsey has had plenty of competition with John Hufnagel, Norris Weese, Mike Franckowiak and rookie Craig Penrose (San Diego State). Franckowiak, drafted a year ago, played last season as a running back. Penrose was a member of the College All-Star team a week ago.

Other veterans who joined the Bronco camp early this season included guard Carl Schaukowitch and defensive end Charlie Smith, who both finished last season on the injured reserve list; also running back Alfred Haywood and John Tarver. Haywood finished the 1975 season with the Broncos but saw only special team duty, while Tarver was signed as a free agent after last season.

Denver's first round draft choice, guard Tom Glassic, had also been chosen for the College All-Star game.

Prior to camp opening, Denver had signed 12 of its 15 draft choices. That left safety Kurt Knoff, Penrose and center Jim Czirr as the only unsigned draftees.

Ralston ended his fourth year as Denver's head coach, with a 6-8 overall record. Five of the six games were won at home; two losses (to Miami and Cincinnati) came by just a single point each.

Running back Jon Keyworth led the Broncos in both rushing and receiving for 1975. He carried 182 times for 725 yards and three touchdowns; and caught 42 passes for 314 yards and one touchdown.

Otis Armstrong, who carried the ball only 31 times last year, has apparently fully recovered from the hamstring problem that sidelined him for ten games last season. In 1974 Armstrong was the NFL's leading rusher.

About the Bears' game Ralston said: "We will lead with our veteran line-up and probably use them well into the second quarter of the game. Then we'll substitute liberally, taking the opportunity to get a look at most of our younger players in a game condition. The 'younger players' include some names familiar to NFL fans, including running back Jim Kiick, who is bidding for a Bronco roster spot. Tackle Claudie Minor will open on the right side of the offensive line, with veteran Marv Montgomery reclaiming his left tackle spot he held prior to receiving a severely broken leg which sidelined him in late 1973.

Another important offensive battle going on is among the receivers, where second year pros Rick Upchurch and Jack Doblin are pressing veterans Haven Moses and Bill Van Heusen for starting jobs.

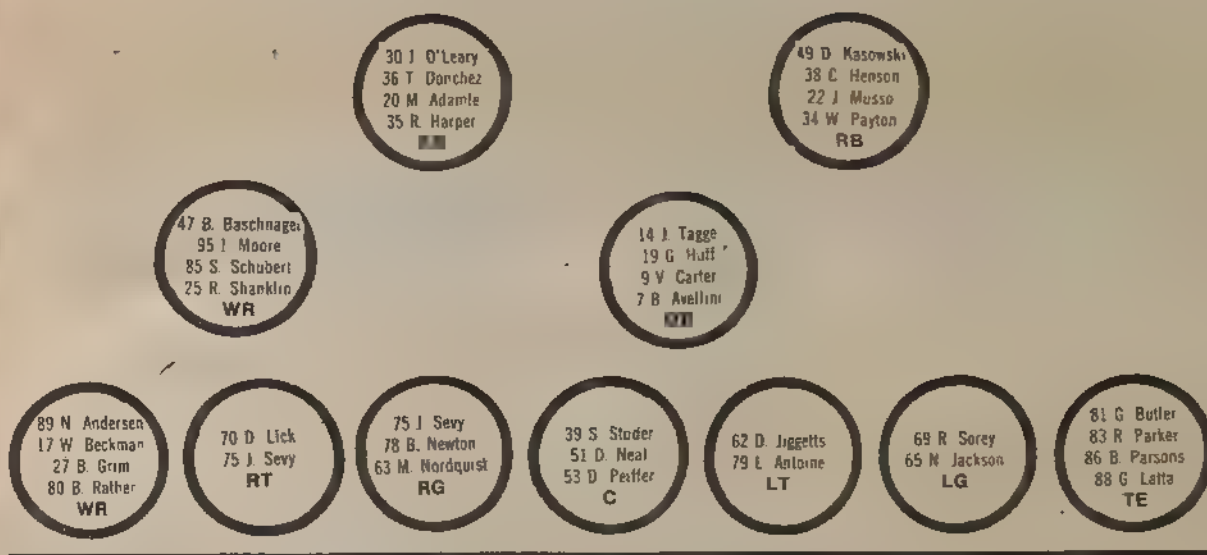

Defensively, the front four will be Barney Chavous, Paul Smith, Lyle Alzado and either John Grant or Rubin Carter. The linebackers will be Randy Gradishar, Tom Jackson and Joe Rizzo, while the starting secondary will include Louis Wright and Calvin Jones at the corners and Bill Thompson and John Rowser at the safeties.

Punter Bill Van Heusen and kicker Jim Turner are both ready to play, yet the Bronco's 15th round draft pick from Louisville (Wilbur Summers) may see some action at both position.

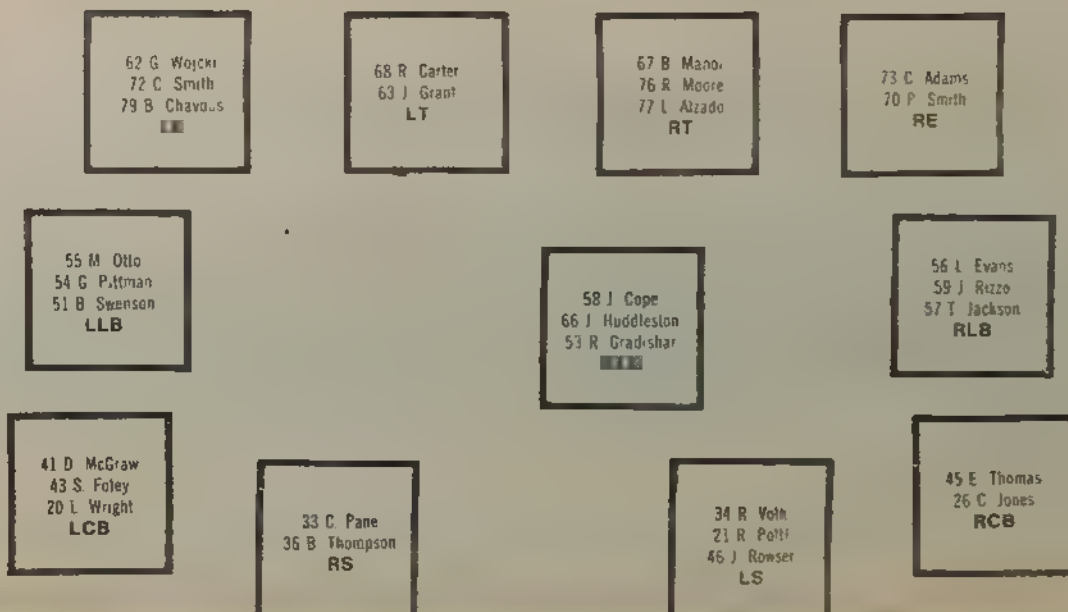

Saturday's game will be an official function of the Colorado Centennial-Bicentennial Commission. Sunday is the official 100th birthday of the State of Colorado. Special pre-game and halftime activities have been planned, including the Broncos giving away a new '76 Dodge Dart.

The Bears and the Broncos have met only five times before, with Chicago holding a 3-2 series edge. Last year the two teams met at Soldier Field in a pre-season meeting, the Broncos handed the Bears their only shutout defeat of the entire year 13-0. In their last regular season confrontation, the Bears won a 33-14 decision in Denver.

Finks Hopes to Stand Pat in 1976

With the courage of a riverboat gambler, Jim Finks shuffled and reshuffled the Bears' roster in an attempt to build a winner in 1975, his first full season as general manager.

This season he says he will stand pat.

When Bear fans converge on wind-swept Soldier Field, Finks says they will see the "nucleus" of a Super Bowl contender — even at the quarterback position.

"If we can just leave this nucleus alone, obviously add to it in the next couple of years, and do a good job of training and developing these guys, I think there's enough skill and talent on this club to be a contending team," Finks said.

Bears' GM

"I think we've got all the shuffling out of the way. Now we need time — to get these players some experience. With experience comes confidence and with confidence comes success."

Finks should know. His front-office savvy transformed the Minnesota Vikings into the NFC's Central Division kingpin before he accepted a new challenge and packed his bags for Chicago. In his last four seasons with the Vikings, the club won 47 games. The Bears have won 47 games in their last 10 seasons.

Finks claims no secrets, though he could have used a few gambler's tricks last year when the Bears fought through their second straight 4-10 season, winning two of their last three games to do it. Finks and Jack Pardee, his hand-picked coach, spent most of the campaign trying out new faces and bidding farewell to a long list of established veterans.

By December, the Bears had only 16 players left from the 52 on their pre-training camp roster.

"We didn't have a nucleus last year," Finks said. "We thought going into camp that we would have a pretty good nucleus of guys who had played three or four years. We didn't have it."

"We went through a very difficult season in 1975. But we just did what we had to do, and it was virtually to start all over. We ended up with 17 rookies on our team, the youngest team in the NFL, and we paid the price for it and it's not going to be much easier this year."

But, Finks said, "If we can retain the players that we have on our squad this year and get the kind of improvement out of them that we can expect after the 1976 season, I think we'll be able to see some daylight at the end of the road. It will just be having the courage to make some decisions and living with them and let the other things take care of themselves."

One of Finks' chief concerns is the demise of the National Football League's Rozelle Rule, which was struck down by a federal court judge.

"All of the rules that exist or did exist in the National Football League were put in for the sole purpose of having competitive balance, allowing the teams that had been unsuccessful, to get their share of good football players and become competitive," Finks explained. "That starts with the college draft, the waiver system, the ability to trade players and the ability to control players to a certain extent."

The control came under the Rozelle Rule, which prevented a player from playing out his option and signing with another team without his new team giving due compensation to the team he left, usually in the form of a player or players of equal value.

"We feel that unless we can get some sort of a replacement or a substitute for the Rozelle Rule — which has to be bargained collectively with the players — it would be very difficult for anybody to forecast how long it's going to take anybody to build a winner," Finks said.

"Without a Rozelle Rule, or some form of compensation, we might find ourselves confronted with the loss of two or three very key players, because they might take the attitude, 'Well, we haven't been to the playoffs the four years that I've been here, and I want to go where I know I'm going to be in the playoff.'"

"What would happen if two years from now, just when we think we're getting ready to make our move, Wally Chambers, Bob Avellini and Craig Clemons all decided they were going to go somewhere else? That is the thing that bothers us."

Then again, Finks and Pardee could have a winner by 1978 themselves, and maybe signing top stars from other teams who want to jump to a playoff contender.

Finks doubts that. He says the Bears' club he took over in late 1974 was "by a long shot" behind the three-year-old Vikings expansion franchise he took over in 1964. It took five years for Finks to build a consistent winner at Minnesota.

Striking a note of optimism, he said last season the Bears "became stable even after some very rough weeks where we were embarrassed. They never quit and at the end of the year they were a better team than they were at the first of the year."

"It's going to be interesting to see how we take off this year. Are we going to be where we were last year, or are we going to be up a notch?"

Some new faces will appear on the squad this year, because Finks said at least 10 players made the team last season "only because our roster was 43." But he says the "big, big turnover is over."

He won't prognosticate about wins and losses, but says as phase II for building a winner, "I'd like us to be in more games this year than we were in last year — and maybe win a few more than last year."

Greg Gordon is a writer for United Press International in Chicago.

Finks looks to happier days for the Bears ... much like last year's game number 12 ... a 25-21 home win over the Detroit Lions Going back to set-up is one of the new faces in the 1976 Bear Camp, quarterback Jerry Tagge. He was the second round draft choice of the Green Bay Packers in 1972. Tagge has also played in the WFL.

Linebacker Talk . . . these two former NFL linebackers have a strategy session during the scrimmage. Bear head coach Jack Pardee (right) played 15 seasons in pro ball, while defensive line coach Brad Ecklund played six of his own.

Scrimmage

Here are a few glimpses of the Chicago Bears hard at work during a pre-season scrimmage session (July 17). The object of all the work is to comprehend the football basics being taught and to regain the physical shape that was abandoned by most players last December.

Runningback Johnny Musso (22) finds a hole big enough to drive just about anything through on this play; his thanks go to the usually seldom-recognized offensive line.

Loneliness of the Long Distance Kicker . . . Thinking things over is Chicago's second-year man from Notre Dame, kicker Bob Thomas.

Asher Concludes Pro Career

Lake Forest — Six-year veteran Bob Asher, a regular at right tackle during Abe Gibrón's three seasons as coach of the Chicago Bears, retired from football on July 20. Asher announced his retirement 30 minutes before the Bears were to start their second practice of the day.

A former All-American from Vanderbilt, Asher said the main reasons for his decision to leave the game were physical:

"My legs are gone. They're dead. I've been feeling pain in my neck and back. It was painful to play and I was always fatigued," the 6-6, 263 pound Asher told the Bear press corps.

"It has been getting harder to get ready to play. Last year I had muscle problems in both legs, bone spurs in the elbows, and the neck and back problems. The intensity of hitting big people finally caught up with me. It all added up.

"You have to be big, strong and durable to play this game ... and now I'm not durable enough. When you play with the intensity that's required, you better be durable."

Asher came to the Bears in August of 1972 in a trade with the Dallas Cowboys. As a rookie in 1970, Asher went to the Super Bowl with Dallas backing up Rayfield Wright. In '71, he did not play because of knee surgery.

Asher included that trip to the Super Bowl with his top moments in football along with becoming an NFL regular with the Bears.

He lost his regular's spot to rookie Jeff Sevy last season.

Bear general manager Jim Finks said he was hoping Asher would get over the physical problems which plagued him in '75.

"We had hoped that Bob would regain his 1974 form but he couldn't.

Head coach Jack Pardee offered Asher his "personal best wishes for success. The team is going to miss him."

Asher said he will balance several job possibilities in the Chicago area against returning to graduate school. He holds a B.A. in mathematics from Vanderbilt.

DOUG BUFFONE'S CHICAGO BEAR REPORT

500 North Michigan Avenue, Suite 700
Chicago, Illinois 60611

All but Clemons, a safety, are Bear running backs.

- A Bear Report Regular -

Defensive Backfield Takes Shape

The Bears had a set of goals in 1975 which Coach Jack Pardee said "the good teams achieve." The Bears, who were 4-10, did not achieve them.

They came close in two areas. Pardee wanted 45 sacks. After being on schedule for most of the year, they ended up with 35.

Pardee wanted to hold the opponent to 3.4 yards per rush. It ended up 3.8 yards per rush.

"It showed we could rush the passer and stop the run," said Pardee. "What it comes down to is obvious, the bomb is what killed us."

Livers Quick

Cornerback Virgil Livers, who gained some notoriety for running the 100-yard dash at Western Kentucky, practiced running 100 yards backwards during the winter.

Cornerback Allan Ellis, who already had better man-to-man techniques than any of the others, broke his thumb playing softball but played well enough with a cast on one hand to immediately catch Pardee's eye.

No other area on the team solidified as fast as the defensive backfield. It is both a good sign "Sure, I'll tell a guy if I see something he's doing wrong, but I like to follow, too. I can learn from all of them. Plank has great hustle and attitude. Virgil has great concentration. Allan is one of the quickest and fastest in the league."

If there's a harder hitter on the team than Plank, it's Clemons, who doesn't think his loss of weight will weaken him.

"Oh, no," he smiled. "That's my asset. Why work on your asset? My weakness is man-to-man defense, so I'm working on my back peddling, keeping low and my burst to the ball carrier. Do you see how everyone is covering on the first week of camp, though? I have a bruised toe and I'm wearing the next thing to tennis shoes and I'm not doing bad. Just think when I get cleats on."

Size No Gauge

If the four end up as a unit, someone should sponsor a contest for a nickname — like the Mean Midgets. Livers is 5-8 1/2, Ellis 5-10, Clemons 5-11 and Plank 5-11 1/2. Knox, who has played the fifth back in prevent defenses, is 5-9.

"I wish they were all 6-3 but they aren't," says Pardee. "If you're a good defensive back it doesn't matter what size you are. When Pat Fischer (an All-Pro and former Pardee teammate) first came to this Lake Forest camp (with the St. Louis Cardinals) he wasn't any bigger than the ball boys. Experience makes up for lack of height."

Don Pierson is a sports writer for the Chicago Tribune.

Free safety Doug Plank puts the wraps on St. Louis wide receiver J.V. Cain during 1975 game action.

Improvement

Pardee wanted to give up under 200 points. His team yielded 379.

"We have to improve the secondary," he said.

After only a week of training camp, it was obvious that the secondary improved itself.

Free safety Doug Plank, whose shoulders ached from hitting other bodies — sometimes teammates, beefed up with weights so much that a standard greeting at Lake Forest on opening day was: "Have you seen Plank!"

Strong safety Craig Clemons weighed 205 pounds a year ago and found he was too heavy to play Pardee's demanding man-to-man defense. He took off nearly 15 pounds and feels and a bad one. The four look good enough to play, but no one else is doing much pushing. Reliable Billy Knox is the only veteran in reserve.

Livers, displaying great quickness and reaction to compensate for his lack of size, had been the biggest question mark, but after two days, Defensive Backfield Coach Ross Fichtner said, "I don't think we could even trade for anyone who could beat him out."

Clemons Can Lead

Clemons, the "old man" of the secondary at 27, talked about leadership:

Bear Report Editor

Our first issue made it through presses on schedule last week, despite a few difficulties and we now welcome all of our new subscribers to issue number two.

Mail Delay

In our production process, the copy for each issue is mailed from Chicago to Sun Prairie, Wisconsin during the week prior to publication.

Unfortunately, some of the material mailed on July 12 was waylaid somewhere between the two towns and did not arrive until July 21, too late for our first issue.

Sorry Fran

That caused us to hold out the first column of one of our regular writers, Fran Spielman. Her initial story was among the delayed mail.

Fran, a sports and news reporter for Chicago's WIND Radio, has her column included this week. We apologize to her and to our readers for the exclusion.

Welcome Bruiser

Also in the Bear Report for the first time this week is a new comic feature — Little Bruiser. He'll be with us throughout the remaining 25 issues. His misadventures can be found at the bottom of page two. Welcome aboard Bruiser.

Don in Montreal

Our next two issues will feature guest columnist Ed Stone of the Chicago Tribune. He'll be substituting for one of our regulars, Don Pierson, also from the Trib.

Don, who is also a track and field writer in addition to covering the Bears, is currently in Montreal for the Olympic Games. Although, he's there strictly as a fan.

Headstart

If you've compared the 1976 Bears' schedule with that of a year ago, you may have noticed that the NFL begins play a week earlier (this Saturday) than in 1975.

The change was made in order to avoid having playoff games on Christmas Day. The AFC and NFC championships are now set for Sunday, December 26th.

The Predictors

All of the football-oriented magazines are now coming out with their pre-season predictions on the outcome of the current NFL season.

The guesses as to which rookies will be first-year stars are also being published. The Bears' top two draft picks, tackle Dennis Lick (1) and wide receiver Brian Baschnagel (3) were both named to Playboy Magazine's top rookie list (of 27) by Anson Mount.

Your Reactions

We again ask to hear from all of you charter subscribers to the Bear Report. What are your reactions to our publication? Would you like to see something which isn't being included?

What about the Bears for 1976? What about starting a fan club for your favorite Bear player? If you have views on anything concerning the Chicago Bears we'd like to read them.

Send any comments to: Bear Report Editor, 1948 North Lincoln, Chicago, Illinois 60614.

Issues Remaining

Here is a tentative list of the remaining 24 issue dates for the Bear Report:

Aug. 5, Aug. 12, Aug. 19, Aug. 26, Sep. 2, Sep. 9, Sep. 16, Sep. 23, Sep. 30, Oct. 7, Oct. 14, Oct. 21, Oct. 28, Nov. 4, Nov. 11, Nov. 18, Nov. 25, Dec. 2, Dec. 9, Dec. 16, Dec. 30, Jan. 20, Feb. 17, May 12.

Letters to the Editor

Bear Report welcomes all Letters to the Editor. Due to space limitations, it may be necessary to shorten letters to fill the space available. Bear Report does not necessarily agree with the views stated in letters we receive.

Letters to the Editor 1948 N. Lincoln Chicago, Ill. 60614

DAD'S HAPPY

Dear Doug,

It is really hard to get information about the Bears out here in California, so I'm pleased to hear about your "Bear Report".

Enclosed are a couple of pictures taken last year at the Bears vs 49ers game here by the local newspaper photographer. You may keep them if you like — No. 71 is my son Roger.

Enclosed is my check for a year's subscription.

Sincerely,

Howard Stillwell
Novato, California

(Editor's Note: Doug forwarded these photos to the office and we're very happy to show them here. We encourage photos as well as letters. Keep them coming. Ed.)

HEAD ON . . . The Bears' defensive line goes head-on with the San Francisco 49ers offensive line in last year's game on the coast, November 16. Doug Buffone (55) is at his left linebacking position . . . Next to him is defensive tackle (73) Mike Hartenstine.

TALKING IT OVER . . . It's number 55 again on the call. Last season Doug Buffone took over the duties of calling out the Bears' defensive formations. He'll handle the same chores in 1976. Other players are: (48) Allan Ellis, (45) Doug Plank, (73) Hartenstine and (71) Roger Stillwell.

CAMP TRANSACTIONS

LAKE FOREST, ILL. — In addition to the retirement of right tackle Bob Asher on July 20, the Chicago Bears roster was reduced by four the same day when four other players were put on waivers.

Those waived were: Bill Marek (Wisconsin), Ron Cuie (Oregon St.), Eddie Moss (Southeast Missouri St.) — all running backs — and safety Joe Larkin.

Marek and Cuie were rookies. Moss was obtained in a conditional trade with the St. Louis Cardinals during the off season. Larkin was a free agent, who had trials with the Los Angeles Rams and teams in the CFL and WFL.

The Bears now have 67 players on their roster.

Bob Asher (QT)	6-6	258	Vanderbilt	July 20 - Retired
Ron Cuie (RB)	6-1	199	Oregon St.	July 20 - Waivers
Joe Larkin (S)	5-11	195	Boise St.	July 20 - Waivers
